

Standard Evacuation Process

SHORT DESCRIPTION OF EVACUATION PROCESS

Two types of evacuation from the building may be performed:

A FIRE EVACUATION will be performed if a fire anywhere in the building will necessitate that all people have to vacate the building. All door openings have to be closed, but not locked, to ensure that minimum airflow (which can feed a fire) is possible, but that fire fighting personnel can enter into any premises for fire fighting and/or inspection purposes.

An EXPLOSIVE EVACUATION will be performed in case of any explosion, possible explosion, bomb threat, suspicious parcel, armed attack or similar situation where it will be necessary to evacuate all people from the building. All door openings have to remain open or at least unlocked to ensure that emergency and investigative personnel with sniffer dogs are able to enter ANY and ALL premises unhindered for emergency and/or inspection purposes.

- Everyone, including tenants, staff and clients, have to evacuate the building through the nearest and safest exit in a calm and orderly manner.
- All tenants/staff have to proceed to the assembly point, where roll-call must be done to establish if all are accounted for.
- The assembly point is the furthest point of the St Andrews hockey field, on the other side of Kellner Street and can be entered through the gates which will be opened during an evacuation.

EVACUATION ALARM SIGNALS

- An audio message stating: "This is an emergency evacuation. Stay calm and do not run!"
- Red only flashing light in the passage will indicate a FIRE EVACUATION – all doors (excluding roller shutters) must be closed after evacuation.
- Red and Yellow flashing light in the passage will indicate an EXPLOSIVE EVACUATION – all doors must be unlocked and left open after evacuation.
- Red and yellow flags used by security and Shop Marshals will indicate the type of evacuation.
